

Inclusivity: Continuing the Conversation

Why continue the conversation? Because it is our job and context counts! Our teams are working within the context of a nation that is crying out for social justice and racial equality. At the same time, conflict management has moved to the forefront of attention for managers. As leaders in the workplace, we must proactively seek opportunities to resolve discontent. If it exists, it isn't hard to spot! So why is workplace conflict so prevalent? Why do managers spend so much time acting as referees rather than coaches? Join Lisa and Dave as they take a look at ourselves and our teams and ask the question - are we being as inclusive as we possibly can be?

Learning Objectives:

- Understand the aspects of diversity and inclusion that are part of our jobs as front-line leaders
- Learn to facilitate a difficult conversation to continuously improve the work environment
